

Plaintiff Attorney,

Please pass this email on to your client if you think your client might have an interest in receiving a piece of their judgment now.

LFG understands some clients need financial resources now given what they've been through. Your client endured a litigation process and felt the elation of winning a judgment. When they thought they were getting near the end, they felt the angst and uncertainty of the post-trial motion stage and finally felt the frustration of finding that with an appeal there will be no early end in sight.

What makes LFG unique is that we simply purchase a portion of the judgment, putting money in the pocket of your client today. It gives your client some peace of mind; even if the judgment is overturned, your client keeps the money received from us. With their downside hedged, it's easier for your client to face down low-ball settlement offers especially since the statutory interest in state appeals courts, is often enough to cover the full cost of LFG.

After purchase we don't get involved in the case; instead we stand by your clients as a silent partner until the last appeal is decided, no matter how long it takes. One of our clients went to the U.S. Supreme Court twice!

Selling a portion of the judgment may be a better option than borrowing money with a house or investments as collateral and knowing that the loan must be repaid regardless of the outcome of the appeal. While the pain of the appeal is intense, the pain of unexpectedly having to repay a loan if the appeal is lost is the worse.

All appeal cases are unique. An application begins the process. If the application is approved we generate a proposal or term sheet for your consideration. Selling a portion of a judgment is not for everyone; as you can tell from our conversation we are not a high pressure sales organization. I look forward to speaking with you or your client to answer any questions you might have.

Best Regards
